

BARTOS BROTHERS BIO

The Bartos Brothers – Bartek born in '79 and Piotr born in '84 are a Wroclaw film duo. The director, producer, and screenwriter, Bartek, having majored in Film and Television production, graduated from the Silesia University Department of Radio and Television. Piotr works as a director of photography, editor, but first and foremost, he is an artist experimenting with the moving image. Until 2008, they have operated separately. Bartek produced documentaries for a Dutch television. He has also collaborated with such individuals as the Oscar winner Mikie Van Diem ("Character") on the production of "X-ray eyes." He has directed cultural and entertainment shows for Polish Public Television and commercial station. He directed TV shows like: Red Bull X-Fighters. He produced and directed TV commercials and music videos. Piotr pursued an independent creative career, experimenting with film, photography and graphics, He has collaborated with various artists, including Tomek Tryzna, the writer of the novel "Panna Nikt" (Miss Nobody) which was adapted into a film by Andrzej Wajda. Together they have co-authored "Dancing in Shells" a photographic prose published by the G+J House. He has co-directed the film "Answers to Questions Never Asked" along with the music artist L.U.C. for whom he has shot several music videos. In 2008, his multimedia installation "Seven Seasons of the Year" was presented as part of the IFF New Horizons. In 2013 the Bartos Brothers opened the MANIFIESTAfilm studio in Wroclaw, the aim of which is to produce independent auteur cinema. The film "Boy with a Frog" (Best Film/Magnify Competition/IFF NEW HORIZONS 2014) were their joint full feature directorial debut.